A bell rings, and the ensuing scramble results in a jumbled conglameration of bodies and books. The class of '68 is born. In the days that followed we learned that the office was on the first floor, and that there was no swimming pool on the roof. But soon our knowledge of Moeller grew, and with it grew our spirit. As freshmen we realized our position and reflected our desire to be "Men of Moeller" through our support of school functions and athletic events. Semesters came and went and soon our test of strength was over. Those of us who endured became not just students of Moeller, but members of the class of '68.

A dedicated group of sophomores gathered in the corridors on a September morning in 1965. Their background had one common feature now, they had made it through their freshman year. With this common knowledge in mind an anticipated feeling of superiority grew. Now all of a sudden it was we who were selling the elevator passes to the fourth floor. But something more important had developed from our past; stability. With our new-found time for extra-curricular activities, and the ranks of clubs and teams began to swell. The records of our reserve athletic teams reflect our ability not only to participate but to win. And the class of '68 carried this new characteristic into every phase of school life.

With two years of experience we entered our junior year. We soon found it a little difficult to "rally round the flag" of Moeller. Spirit was hard to find for we had no real goals. As freshmen we pushed for acceptance; as sophomores, excellence. But now what? The answer was not easy to find. But soon each individual realized the purpose for existence is development. We then devoted our time and energy to improving our school and more especially our class. We accepted Moeller as a vehicle for this development. And soon the year was over and we looked forward to our senior year.

What is a senior? How does he act? Where does he go? What does he do? We struggled our way from lowly freshmen all the way to the top. All the way there seemed to be something pushing us on. We weren't ever really sure what it was, but finally we made it. The pinnacle was reached. It was the opening of school, 1967. It was really something, that first day of our senior year. Each one of us could look around and see faces he'd seen for four consecutive years. We had grown together through these trying years. And now here we were, the class of '68. We had many questions, but perhaps the biggest one in our minds was, can we succeed? We had elected our officers, we had formed our student council, and most importantly we had our own opinions. Each one of us knew what he wanted to accomplish, and the opening of school could only lead each individual to consider our chances for success.

We had one big thing pushing for us when we started our final year, and that was our new administration. Of course at this time we weren't really sure what to expect. We weren't really sure whether or not the administration would aid us in our attempt to begin to govern ourselves, and self-government perhaps more than anything else we wanted to achieve. We wanted to prove to ourselves and to others that we could take on responsibility and could conduct ourselves as "Men of Moeller" within our own guidelines. And so it was with great anxiety that we awaited to see the position of our administration.

We wondered if we could succeed. We wondered about our new administration. We did know one thing for sure, however, when we started our final year. We knew that the outcome would rest initially and finally upon our own shoulders. It was up to us now to determine if at graduation we could look back on our last year at Moeller and say that we had succeeded.

And so with many convictions, thoughts, and questions we began our senior year.

As we wound our way through our high school years two words were constantly appearing to us. Whether we read them in the "Crusader" or heard them over the announcements, they were always present. "School spirit" became the key phrase in our high school vocabulary. The reason was quite apparent. They represented that certain something that every truly successful class must have claim to. It's rather difficult to define school spirit, but it is rather easy to exemplify it.

It seemed that school had just begun when before we realized it the football season was underway. Our varsity team was looking forward to another successful season as has been the heritage of football teams here at Moeller. The senior class realized that it needed something to unify itself with and it found the answer in the support of the football team. The varsity team, featuring a starting lineup composed mainly of members of the class of '68, again carried the pigskin through a successful season, that terminated in an 8 win 2 loss record. Of course there were low points in the season. The two losses which did eliminate us from contention for the GCL crown had an affect on school spirit. Whether or not this affect was as serious as supposed is difficult to determine. However, the relative easiness with which the spirit once again reached a peak would seem to indicate that it had never reached the alleged low ebb. But a sufficient amount of school spirit was always present and the fact that it did dwindle after our two losses only indicates that the class of '68 took so much pride in our representatives on the gridiron that it was extremely difficult to see them lose. Perhaps there never was a lack of school spirit, but only a loss of the feeling of grandeur that had been previously mistaken by certain individuals for school spirit.

Unification is important in anything. But it is extremely so whenever there is a large group of people or things. The class of '68 would fall under the former category and therefore it assumed the need for unification. Unification can be found in many ways but one chief method is group action.

Only three years ago Moeller High School began something that soon became one of the high points of the pre-Christmas portion of the year. The Woodpile contest was begun. Although at first several difficulties did arise they were soon worked out and things did begin to flow smoothly. The class of '68 assumed the responsibility of carrying on this Moeller tradition. The Woodpile contest, as in previous years, resulted in a battle between the junior and senior class. The end result was victory for the seniors. However this victory was not easily come by. It was the result of a unified effort by many of the seniors.

A direct result of the football season was the homecoming. The homecoming activities and events were directed by members of the senior class, and resulted in something that will long be remembered by all who participated in them. Of course one of the key features of the homecoming was the dance that followed. It too was directed by seniors and added to the grandeur of the celebration.

And soon the football season was over. It had served its purpose for it had unified the school, especially the senior class and had allowed the class of '68 to assume some of the responsibility we desired, by allowing us to direct the building of the floats, the woodpile contest, the parade, and the homecoming dance.

It was now almost Christmas and everyone looked forward to the holidays with great expectation.

"Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year." It's all too easy to say this when you're a well-fed, healthy, middle class suburbanite enjoying the Christmas season. But what if you're a starving, disease-ridden slum dweller. It's not so easy then. In fact it's really difficult to find a Christmas spirit when you have to feed nine children on a welfare check. The class of '68 was quick to recognize this and to effect its solution.

Moeller High School has established many traditions in its few years of existence. But few share the significance and the importance of the Poor Family Project. Each year at Moeller the individual homerooms adopt their own poor family within the Greater Cincinnati area. The members of the homerooms then collect and give to their family a wide variety of food stuffs and other gifts. Once again the class of '68 assumed the role of school leader and piloted the student body in their efforts. As a result Christmas became a happier occasion for many needy people in the area.

The spirit of Christmas was also manifested in other ways at Moeller. The homerooms, adorned in the trimmings of the Yuletide season, provided the most visible reflection of the spirit. But visible signs weren't really needed for you could almost feel the gaiety of the students. The Christmas assembly, which featured selections presented by the band, marked the beginning of the Christmas holidays.

The merry thoughts of the Christmas season soon began to fade as the students began to realize that with the new year came the mid-term exams. But to the seniors the new year meant something else. For this was no ordinary year. It was 1968, the year of supremacy, the final reigning year for the class of '68.

One sport Moeller had never been particularly strong in was basketball. We never seemed to find the right combination of spirit and talent to finish with a highly successful season. But the 67-68 season was to prove different.

Sparkplugged by its senior members, the varsity basketball team reeled off victory after victory in the early part of the season. The spirit, however, for some reason dropped off quite rapidly after a loss that ended the early victory streak. Though it seemed as if this problem might prove to be serious, it did not last very long. Pi Epsilon Pi, the senior pep club, was formed. Backed by this organization, composed of members of the class of '68, and the student body that rallied around it, the basketball team proceeded to battle its way to a strong second place in the GCL. The team then went all the way to the semi-finals before they were eliminated and the season was ended.

With an overall record of 18 wins and 4 losses the Moeller varsity team compiled the best record in Moeller history. But the success of the basketball team was not the only important outcome of the basketball season. The 18 and 4 record marked not only victory for the team but also for the class of '68. Our class had instilled in the student body of Moeller, for the first time, a really sound backing of the basketball team. The result was evident.

It was the same pioneering senior class who suggested and presented the first basketball homecoming in our school's history. The homecoming included a semi-formal dance which was held in the cafeteria after the homecoming game.

The basketball season was over. A success in many ways, it had marked a turning point in Moeller history. And with its termination the student body began the spring portion of the school year.

A long awaited spring finally arrived and with it came what has generally proven to be the low ebb of the school year. It seems that at this time each year the spirit of the school begins to lag and almost disappear. Most of the students walk about in an apparent daze, with little to do but await the closing of school some two months away.

But this year, encouraged and aided by members of the faculty, the senior class determined to remedy the situation of spring apathy. The pep club had by now disbanded, but the individual spirit of the members of the class of '68, the striving spirit to make our last year at Moeller the best one of all, still remained. One reflection of this spirit was the Senior Prom. Held at the Lookout House in Kentucky it proved to be the social highlight of the entire year and one of the most successful proms in memory. Many seniors were occupied in preparations for the prom, and those who weren't kept busy by participation in other spring activities. The baseball and track teams fought their ways to highly successful seasons and culminated the major athletic seasons at Moeller. Two of the minor sports teams, golf and tennis, were also busy in swinging to successful seasons. Although they did not draw large crowds they kept the members involved and thus aided in abetting the problem of apathy while spreading the fame of Moeller and the class of '68.

Two new innovations were developed by seniors during the spring season. The seniors sponsored a variety show which was highly appreciated by the entire student body. The second new idea was a show sponsored by the Sing-Out Cincinnati cast. This evening show drew a large attendance of Moeller students and faculty members.

Soon spring blossomed into May and graduation was just around the corner for the class of '68.

Our time had finally come. That moment which had always occupied a portion of our thoughts and dreams had arrived. We had been together for four long years. Or were they so long? All of a sudden they seemed short, too short. We had waited for this event for a long time and now it was here. But we weren't really sure if we wanted it to stay. We weren't really sure if we wanted to give up the school that had been the focal point of our spirit, the rallying point around which we had centered our joys, our fears, our anxieties, and our existence. But most of all we didn't know if we were willing to give up the friendships we had at Moeller. For we all had many, and each one seemed so important.

We had become addicted, in a way, to the class of '68. It was our class. We had watched it germinate, sprout leaves, grow and develop into a giant tree. We didn't want to leave it to die. Yet graduation was here and all ceremonies must come to an end. This one proved no exception.

We all tried to cover our emotions, but it was difficult. It was almost too much saying good-bye to friends we knew we'd never see again. But perhaps most difficult of all was saying good-bye to the class of '68. For we were the class of '68. It seemed as though we were leaving a part of our existence, a part of ourselves, behind. And I guess we really were.

Memories are golden and so is silence. Our class had grown from oblivion and flourished in its glory. But nothing escapes the bonds of time. And soon our senior class was gone. But time can never erase the accomplishments of our class, nor the spirit and heritage of its members, the members of the class of '68.

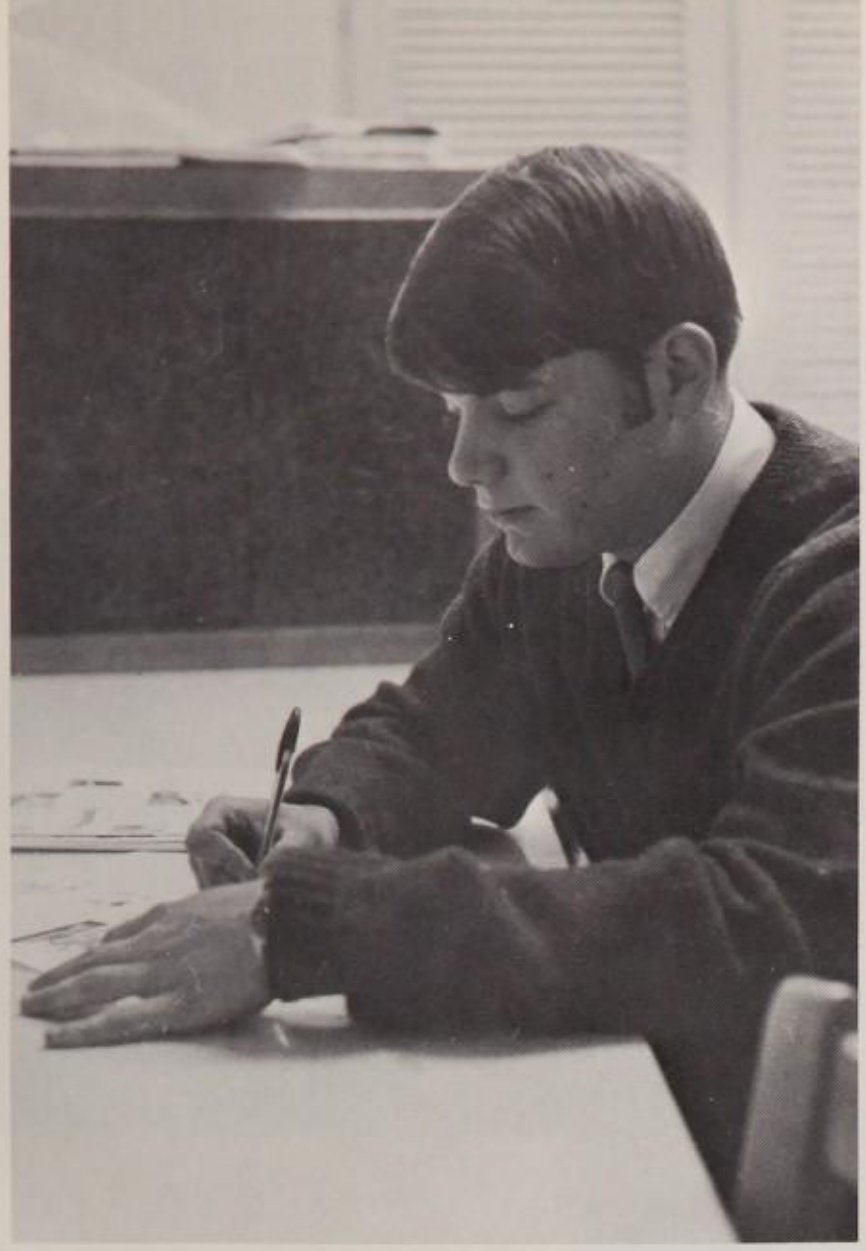
CRUSADER

To achieve creativity in layout and article content, to have comprehensive news coverage, and to produce a paper that had "something to say" were the goals which the 1967-68 edition of the Crusader staff set for themselves. To attain these goals, the staff decided that it had to come out with a newspaper at least once a month, and more if possible. Under the guidance of Brother Joe Rigot, the staff almost made it, failing only in March to produce a new edition.

The majority of the work done on the paper during the year was due largely to the efforts of editor-in-chief, Eric Schlueter, and his assistants. It was their responsibility to assign articles to the writers, submit page layouts, make up headlines, assemble all copy, and arrange it in its final stage for printing.

In all their efforts throughout the year, the staff members tried to give the Crusader a personality and individuality, and make it a paper that students would want to read. They tried to make it the very best paper possible, alive and sensitive to the multitude of personalities which made up Moeller High School in the past year.



Feature Editor, Neal Novak, plans another article.

SQUIRE

Under the capable moderation of Mr. John Massarella, the Squire staff once again published two very fine literary magazines. Although handicapped by a cut in funds, the staff managed to retain the artistic quality that has been the tradition of the Squire since its debut only a few years ago.

The Squire affords those with the ability to write an outlet for their creativity. It gives them an opportunity to see their own ideas and convictions written in their own style and published in their own literary magazine.

HISTORY CLUB

Through a variety of functions and activities, the History Club tries to instill within its members a deeper understanding and awareness of the society around them.

Perhaps the most popular programs of the year were the field trips to such interesting sites as the IBM computer center, Ft. Hill, the Rankin House, and Washington D. C. Under the guidance of their moderator, Mr. Herrlinger, the club met twice a month to view and discuss the effects of Prohibition, the New Morality, apathy, and crime in the United States. At these meetings the members collected dues for the purchase of books for our library and participated in such projects as the restoration of the old Unitarian Church on Montgomery Road.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Brother Ross comments on a proposal.

The Student Council consists of the body of elected representatives who cooperatively attempt to voice the opinions of the student body to the administration and promote leadership, citizenship, and loyalty to the school. The 1967-68 Student Council consisted of a representative from each of the twenty-seven homerooms, a President, a parliamentarian, and a moderator. The officers of the Council were: Jerry Vanden Eynden, President; Dan McDonald, Vice-President; Mike Wathen, Secretary; and Ted Van Fleet, Treasurer.

This year's council faced many new changes. New faces occupied the offices of Principal and Student Council moderator in the persons of Brother Dahlman and Brother Ross respectively. With new faces came new attitudes and new approaches to old problems.

Among the accomplishments of the Student Council this year were the Homecoming festivities, Careers Night, the Big Brother Program, and a talent show. Initiated this year were the basketball homecoming, an inter-school seminar, and a computer dance with Seton High School.

The 1967-68 Junior Class, as a result of the hard work and strong dedication of its Council members, made a fine showing throughout the school year. Among its other accomplishments the Class of '69 won the Homecoming float contest, planned and carried out several group guidance assemblies, and successfully effected the Junior Date Dance and the Junior Trip. Looking ahead, the class prepared a session of questions and answers in an effort to make the best possible selections for their future Senior officers.

L. Smith, J. Millette, J. Grau, J. Weber.

SOPHOMORES

"Soph Power," the message of a sign in the auditorium, was a constant reminder of the unification of the Class of '70. This title was appropriately conveyed by the outstanding spirit and action of the Sophomore Class. Scholastically, the Sophs had an ever-expanding list of names on the honor role and in academic organizations. Athletically, the past school year has seen more Sophomores playing varsity sports than in any other previous year. Furthermore, for the first time in Moeller history, a Sophomore was elected as an officer in the Student Council.

This year's varsity debate team, while visiting debate tournaments throughout the tri-state area, compiled a very impressive record. Winning approximately 70% of the debates in which they participated, the team placed first in several tournaments and ended the season with a tie for third in the district championship. The team had quite a lot of experience and five of the members had attended debate institutions during the summer. The "speech" division of the squad was also successful in the extemporaneous speaking and original oration contests.

Through the experience each member has learned not only how to think logically and to express his thoughts clearly, but more importantly he has gained for himself a certain confidence which will undoubtedly prove to be valuable in his future life.

"YOU, sir, have derived your contentions from preconceived misconceptions. "

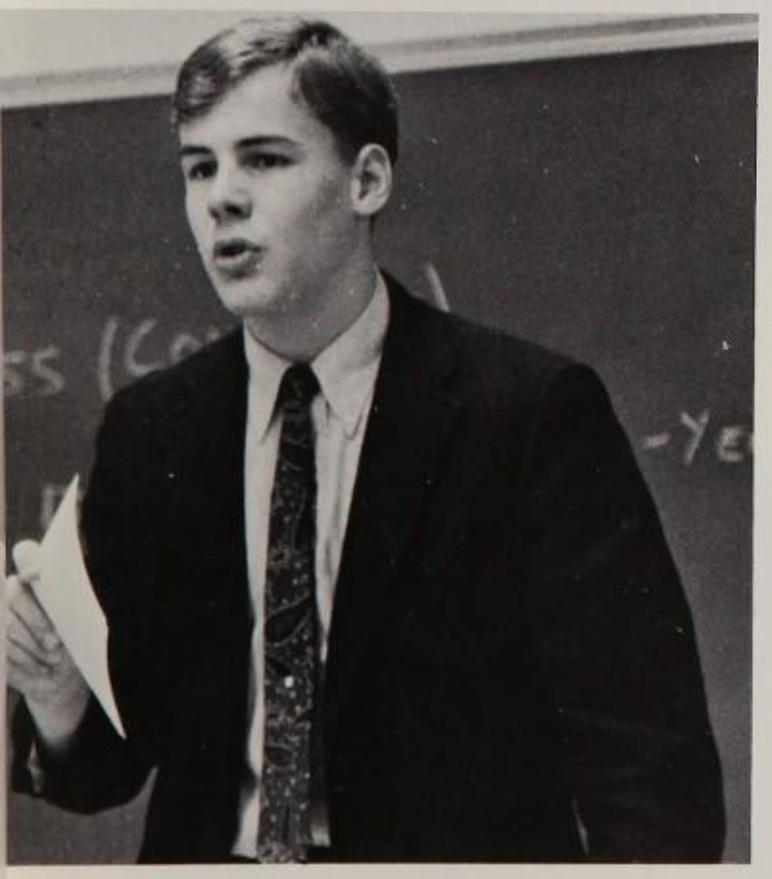
NOVICE SPEECH & DEBATE



The spoken word; the idea; combined they make man's most perfect form of communication, the verbal expression. Ever since man was conceived he has created words to express his ideas. But sometimes his thoughts disagreed with the thoughts of his fellow men. These collisions of ideas have resulted in the debate.

The 1967-68 season for the freshman debaters taught them that other people can speak and think more clearly than they could. Most important, they found the basic quality of teamwork that will be the key to future success.

The 1967-68 Moeller Band, which, at the beginning of the year, was the largest marching unit ever to represent our school, presented a great variety of programs of modern and patriotic music, all of which were well received. Playing at football games and at all athletic assemblies was an important function of the Moeller band. Our Moeller musicians performed exceptionally well in the Holy Name Parade and Blue Ash Memorial Day Parade and, this year, were awarded their second trophy in the great St. Patrick's Day Parade, witnessed by over 100, 000 people. The 1967 Christmas Concert was outstanding and the Spring Concert, highlighted by such selections as "Camelot" and "Fiddler On The Roof," was exceptional.

The Band is directed by Brother Joseph Trageser who, this year, was assisted by Brother John Habjan and Drum Majors, Mike Fitzpatric and Rick Hagee. Also taking part in the leadership were the Senior officers of the Band: Jim Anderson, President, Eric Ware, Vice-President, Chuck Zimmer, Secretary, Bob Vonderhaar, Treasurer, and Rick Collins, Librarian.

The aim of such an organization was to provide its members with a better understanding of the teaching profession and to help them discover if it meets their vocational desires.

This year's group was especially proud of its "class observation" project, which, together with the tutoring program, enabled the members to study the techniques of high school teaching.

The Catholic Student's Mission Crusade, although smaller this year than in the past, has been more active than ever before. Under the leadership of Brother Charles Barnett and President Tom Donnellon, the group made four trips to Appalacia. The work of these dedicated young men has been greatly appreciated. The relative effectiveness of this organization can be seen only in its achievements and it will always remain an integral part of Moeller High School.

GCSL

The 1967-68 school year was a year of growth and influence for the Moeller division of the Greater Cincinnati Safety League. This year, under the leadership of Paul Becksmith, the group initiated many new ideas which helped to promote better driving standards. Among these were the regulation of after-school traffic by club members and the initiation of an intra-school road rally at Moeller. In coordination with other area schools, the Moeller G. C. S. L. also participated in many city wide projects.

For the benefit of all Moeller students, the group planned a "Safety Assembly" to explain the functions and accomplishments of this renowned organization.

Moeller's Big Brother program consisted of a relatively large group of dedicated students willing to sacrifice their time for the benefit of the many young orphans at St. Aloysius Orphanage. Together with their moderator, Bro. Bob Ross, the group spent many hours entertaining the boys and helping them with their studies. The work accomplished by these dedicated young men was greatly appreciated by the orphans and earned the respect of all Moeller students.

GEOLOGY CLUB

The Geology Club, lead by officers Bob Tanner, Paul Becksmith, Ed Mueller, and Fred Millitzer, planned and executed many successful field trips throughout the school year. In an attempt to better understand the environment around them, this group, under the guidance of Brother Hartman, toured such spots as Natural Bridge, in Kentucky, and Hocking Valley, in Ohio. In more direct service to their school, the club helped to plan many of the labs and visual aid programs undertaken by the Earth Science classes.

Though only in its first year at Moeller, the organization has already proven to be a unique and worthwhile endeavor.

SPANISH CLUB

The Spanish Club and its moderator, Mr. Charles Blanford, in coordination with Mt. Notre Dame, shot off to its second year in grand fashion. In an effort to help the Spanish student appreciate the customs, people, and culture of Spain, the club undertook numerous projects. Among these were a program of speeches and slides on Spain, Spanish dancers from Villa Madonna High, a panel discussion with foreign exchange students, and a Christmas pinata party.

This year's club was headed by officers Vince Ernst, John Terzo, Ed Grueter, Wally Stueck, and Jim Poulin.

FRENCH CLUB

The past school year has been a year of organization for the Moeller French Club. Having coordinated itself with a similar group from Mt. Notre Dame, the club held weekly meetings in an effort to promote interest in the French language and culture. Under the competent leadership of their moderator, Brother Novak, the members are well on their way in the establishment of a permanent French Club at Moeller High School.

At a joint meeting of the Notre Dame-Moeller French Clubs, the girls check out the "colonne".

MATH CLUB

The Mathematics Club was organized on an informal basis with emphasis on mutual help. This type of operation established a very favorable atmosphere in the biweekly meetings of the club, through which the difficult subject of mathematics was more easily explored by interested and active members.

Though in its infancy and limited in membership, the club has made many fine accomplishments this year. Outstanding among them have been talks by Mr. John Niehaus, director of the X. U. Computer Center, and Mr. Frank Heile, graduate from Moeller who is currently studying math at M. I. T. Also, the club has done work on various problems from the "Mathematics Student Journal" to which the club subscribes.

CHESS CLUB

The 1967-68 Moeller Chess Club, under the leadership of Mr. Roth Herrlinger and officers Larry Riesenberg, Joe Melia, Dave Mueller, and Andy Rebholz, met every Wednesday afternoon to prepare itself for the rigid competition against other area schools. Among its other accomplishments, this year's club organized the first school-wide chess tournament in Moeller's history.
